Southern Flavours: Phuket Food Tour (morning-lunchtime)

Welcome to Phuket's #1 food tour. There is no question about it - Southern Thai food is sublime. The melting pot of Thai, Malay, Burmese and Chinese cuisine has led to Phuket being crowned 'Thailand City of Gastronomy 2017' by UNESCO.

Join us on our lunchtime Phuket street food tour experience to discover the secrets behind the island's flavors and spots known only to locals. Mop up curries with wood-fired naans and slurp on chai at a tucked away Burmese tea shop. Work a pair of chopsticks over the best bowl of Hokkien noodles in Phuket Town, and indulge in grilled pork dripping with rich peanut satay along with more than a dozen more dishes, showing off the culinary culture of Thailand.

Trust us, you're not going to try food like this anywhere else on Phuket, and while it's tempting to be a beach bum, you'd be one sandwich short of a picnic not to join our movable feast. You'll not only dive into the rich cuisine, but also learn lots about the history and culture of the colorful Old Town of Phuket.

Key Features:

- 09:00 hrs - Pick-up from Port, greeted by your licensed English-speaking guide. Transfer to Phuket Old Town (45 minutes drive)
- 10:00 hrs - Start walking tour in Phuket Old Town - with various stops at local eateries and street food vendors, sampling 14+ tastings with your expert food host (4 hours tour)
- 14:00 hrs - Finish tour. Transfer from Phuket Old Town - Port. (45 minutes-1 hour drive)
- 15:00 hrs - Arrive Port.

Prefer a later experience? Try our Baba Tastes evening food tour which starts at 15:00 hrs.

Group Size: Our lunchtime small group tours have a maximum of 8-12 guests. This is to access the smaller local eateries, and enjoy a more personable experience with the guide.

Inclusions:

- 14+ food tasting menu
- Bottled water and local drinks
- English speaking licensed guide
- Transport to and from the cruise port (air-conditioned vehicles with experienced driver)

Guide: Led by one of our superb Phuket food hosts who is passionate about Thai cuisine.

Suitable for: Our Phuket food tour is designed for adventurous eaters with an interest in discovering the local cuisine. It's a walking tour, but the pace is gentle, the terrain flat and there are rest (eating) stops along the way. Guests must be able to walk between stops.

Tour requirements: Not recommended for guests who are pregnant, or have difficulty walking or walk with a cane.

Before booking - please read the Dietary Information and Food Allergies advice at the end notes of the next tour.

Baba Tastes: Phuket Food Tour (afternoon-evening)

If you truly want to understand what makes Phuket's culinary scene tick, you'd be one wonton short of a noodle bowl not to drag yourself off the island's sun-kissed beaches and join us on our Phuket food tour feast around the back alleys and Sino-Thai streets of old Phuket Town, ground zero for island eating.

On our Phuket food tour you'll be wrapping your chopsticks around 14+ tastes: sticky handmade fresh spring rolls, wok-fried mee hoon, Hokkien noodles peppered with delicate prawn wontons and char sui barbecue pork, leaf-wrapped miang kham bites, and spiced chicken curry puffs,

Our Phuket food tours have been voted the #1 culinary experience on the island. Why? Our Phuket food tours don't focus on only 'Thai' cooking - it's a journey through Baba and Peranakan food history where you'll peel back the layers of Chinese, Malay influences on the island's gastronomy, learn about the ingredients and history of the dishes and find out why it's been granted UNESCO World Heritage intangible status for its food.

Difference between the lunchtime tour and the other evening tour?

The tour visits mostly different vendors due to different times of day, however there is some crossover with the same type of food and a few similar vendors.

- Main difference is the time of day, we wanted to give guests a choice depending on their schedule.
- The morning tour visits Phuket's central market, whilst the afternoon/evening tour sees a different market called Cham-Cha market (as the central market is closed in the afternoon).
- The morning tour is better for pescatarians and no pork diets than the evening tour, which has a few more pork dishes.

🍽 Dietary information

Street food does have some limitations, as these vendors have simple or single item menus, where alternatives are not always available. If a guest has a dietary restriction, please do check the below so we can manage the guest's expectations.

- 🥕 Vegetarian: Sorry, the tours is not suitable as meat and seafood is present in over half of the menu, with no alternatives available.
- 🥕 Vegan: Sorry, the tour is not suitable for vegans.
- 🐟 Pescatarian: Seafood eaters are welcome; you may have to skip 1-2 dishes with meat but there will be plenty of food on the way, so you won't go hungry.
- 🐷 No Pork: You will have to skip 1-2 dishes with pork.
- 🐟 No Seafood: They will have to skip some tastings, we recommend the tour if you are ok with shrimp paste and small dried shrimp in a couple of dishes.
- 🍷 Gluten free: Small amount of gluten in a few dishes. Only recommended if soy sauce is ok.
- 🍷 Celiac: it is not recommended for celiac disease as there is soy sauce in several dishes.
- 🍖 Halal: this tour is not suitable for halal diets as most of the restaurants are not halal-certified.
- 🐄 Lactose free: Suitable for lactose intolerances.

🔍 Food Allergies

If you have a mild allergy, then it is possible to join, however you may have to skip a few dishes, and alternatives are not always available. We do not recommend the tour for severe allergies due to the nature of street food and the cooking process - we can never guarantee any dish to be 100% free from allergens, as cross-contamination is a risk. Even if the allergen item is not in the dish, the vendor could handle allergens in the same kitchen or cookware. Street food vendors do not have the same regulatory standards as modern restaurants.

- 🦞🥜 Shellfish or peanut allergy: There will be few dishes that they'll have to skip
- 🥜 Nut allergy: Other nuts are not used in the dishes, but cross-contamination is a risk.
- 🥥 Coconut allergy: Coconut is used in several dishes that they'll have to skip.
- ? Other allergy? If you have an allergy, please let us in advance. If a guest with a severe allergy insists on going on the tour, then they must sign a waiver for their own liability so they understand the risks <https://waiver.fr/achefstour>

Guest info needed for booking:

- Guest Lead Name - only 1 name is ok of more than 1 in party
- Guest Telephone Number - What's App is best if possible to give to the guide.
- Dietary restrictions/allergies: If an allergy, please give as many details as possible, including the severity of the allergy, are traces acceptable and do they carry an epi-pen or medication?
